

Cultural Innovation International Prize

The Beta Station

The Beta Station is a lab area that hosts workshops, project presentations, debates and activities related to the Beta line exhibitions.

During the «After the End of the World» exhibition (October 2017 – March 2018), the Beta station will become a meeting point and a working space aimed at generating knowledge and inviting different groups and collectives to participate in production and reflection processes around climate change and the anthropocene epoch.

The Beta Station is located at the end of the CCCB's third floor (where the exhibition ends) and consists of two rooms: the first one is 120m² and the second one is 90m².

Should it require a physical format, the winning project will be carried out in this space of the CCCB. Other activities and cultural programmes will take place at the Beta station during the months of the exhibition. Once the prize is awarded, the possibilities of the winning project will be assessed and the space will be adapted to meet the project's needs.

Measurement:

Room 1: 120 m² (24 m. per 5 m.)

Room 2: 90 m² (18m. per 5m.)
